INSTITUTION'S CODE OF ETHICS FOR RESEARCH

Dayananda Sagar college of Dental Sciences, Bangalore has drafted a code of ethics which provide guidelines for professional and ethical conduct of research by the faculty, doctorate students, post graduate students and the undergraduate students. Code of research ethics is a set of principles of research conducts. It sets a benchmark for researchers while conducting their research and fulfil their duties to the research subjects, public, profession and the fellow researchers. Although ethics and laws are intricately related to each other they are not one and the same. Ethical obligations are more binding our human conscience when compared to legal stipulations. Hence, ethical obligations may and often do exceed legal duties.

The code of ethics pertains to the way in which health research has to be conducted while adhering to all the ethical principles of research. When human subjects, patients, animals are recruited for conducting research the researcher should be very careful in adhering to ethical principles. Several international and national agencies have established multiple ethical guidelines which refer to the ethical principles to be followed while recruiting subjects and also conducting and reporting of research. Majorly there are seven ethical principles which are to be strictly followed while conducting research:-

1. Social and clinical value
2. Scientific validity
3. Fair subject selection
4. Favourable risk-benefit ratio
5. Independent review
6. Informed consent
7. Respect for potential and enrolled subjects

1. Social and clinical value

Every research is designed with an intention to answer a specific research question. The question should be relevant and when answered by conducting a research, should be beneficial to the subjects, patients, fraternity, administrators, policy makers and community at large. The question should be justifiable so that the research subjects, patients may be asked to accept some risk or inconvenience. This principle refers to the utility, beneficence to the stake holders of research. It refers to the contribution of research output in expanding the knowledge base, improving the treatment methods, helping the community at large in reducing the burden of disease so that it justifies exposing the research subjects to the given risk and burden of research.

2. Scientific validity

A research study should follow scientific principles of planning, conducting, analysing, reporting and publishing. The principles of research methodology should guide the process of research scrupulously. The scientific rigors maintained in a research ultimately provides validity to research. Scientifically invalid research is outright unethical because it is a waste of resources and subjects or patients are being exposed to unnecessary risks.

3. Independent review

Any research proposal should be thoroughly reviewed by a review board consisting of a panel of experts, nonexperts, lay persons as prescribed by the guidelines of a national, international, local, ethical organisations or agencies. The panel should scrutinize the scientific and ethical validity of the intended research by asking important questions;

- a. Are those who are conducting, examining, diagnosing and treating the research subjects are free of bias?
- b. Is the methodology adopted by the researchers scientifically sound?
- c. Are the human rights of the research subjects protected at all cost?
- d. Has the trial being ethically designed and risk benefit ratio favourable?

The review board monitors the study even while it is going on in order to keep a strict watch on any violations. In our institution a structured IRB is established as per the guidelines of ICMR.

4. Informed consent

It is the primary duty of the researcher to obtain a written informed voluntary consent from the research participant. The prospective participant should be given all the required information about the research in which he/she is participating, the pros and cons of participating in the research, the right to withdraw from research at any phase, the role need to be played by the participant and the minimal information about the nature of the intervention in a language simple and understandable by the patient. This can be done by preparing a "Participant information letter" which is either handed over or explained to the patient. After giving thorough information, the consent is obtained from the participant so that human rights are protected. At times when the participant is legally a minor, proxy consent is obtained from the parents or the legal guardians after providing the required information through the participant information letter. Coercion, appeasement and exorbitant incentives for participating in the research are strictly prohibited. The research subject is given access to the member secretary of IRB by providing the contact details so that the participants are free to communicate any grievances at any time while the research is going on.

5. Respect for potential and enrolled subjects

The participant should be treated with respect as soon as they come forward to participate in the research till the completion of research and even after the research completed. This amounts to protecting the human rights and the rights of a research participant.

- a. Respecting the privacy and maintaining the confidentiality with respect to the data and the identity of the participant during the research and after.
- b. Permitting the participants to withdraw from the research at any moment without any penalty. This refers to respecting their decision at any phase of research.
- c. Monitoring their welfare, adverse reactions, side effects and their health status regularly so that at times the decision is taken by the researcher to remove the participant from the respective arm.
- d. After the research is completed a debriefing session is organised and a clear information is given to the participant about the research outcomes and the arm under which the subject was treated so that no suspense is maintained thereafter with respect to the intervention and the details of the intervention which were administered.

TERMINOLOGIES

"RESEARCH" refers to a class of activities designed to develop or contribute to generalizable knowledge; generalizable knowledge consists of theories, principles, or relationships, or the accumulation of information on which these are based, that can be corroborated by acceptable scientific methods of observation, inference, and/or experiment.

HUMAN BIOMEDICAL RESEARCH (HBR) refers to any research on human subjects that involves:

- a. Intervention on, interaction with, or observation of, humans.
- b. Use or manipulation of any human biological derivative (e.g. human cells, tissues and body fluids, including those which were previously acquired and stored).
- c. Review, analysis and publication of previously compiled identifiable data; for the purpose of studying, diagnosing, treating and/or preventing, any ailment, injury or adverse condition of the human mind or body.

THERAPY

- ✓ An activity that is undertaken with the intention of improving the health of the patient may be considered "THERAPY".

DRUG

PREVENTIVE AGENT

Preventive medicine -The application of preventive measures by clinical practitioners. A specialized field of medical practice composed of distinct disciplines that utilize skills focusing on the health of defined populations in order to promote and maintain health and well-being and prevent disease, disability, and premature death. In addition to the knowledge of basic and clinical sciences and the skills common to all physicians, the distinctive aspects of preventive medicine include knowledge of and competence in biostatistics; epidemiology; administration, including planning, organization, management, financing, and evaluation of health programs; environmental health; application of social and behavioural factors in health and disease; and the application of primary, secondary, and tertiary prevention measures within clinical medicine

SUPPLEMENT INTERVENTION

Intervention study - An investigation involving intentional change in some aspect of the status of the subjects, e.g., introduction of a preventive or therapeutic regimen or an intervention designed to test a hypothesized relationship; usually an experiment such as a randomized controlled trial.

ANIMAL RESEARCH

Animal model - A study in a group of laboratory animals that uses conditions of animals analogous to conditions of humans to model processes comparable to those that occur in humans.

BASIC ETHICAL PRINCIPLES

All HBR must be conducted in accordance with these three fundamental ethical principles:

1. Autonomy (Respect for persons)

This incorporates at least two basic ethical considerations:

- ✓ Respect for autonomy, which requires that those who are capable of deliberation about their personal choices should be treated with respect for their capacity for self-determination.
- ✓ Protection of persons with impaired or diminished autonomy (such as children or the mentally disabled), which requires that those who are dependent or vulnerable be afforded additional security against harm or abuse.

Informed consent: It should be voluntary, legal, and comprehending and should be recorded from every subject recruited in the study.

2. Non-maleficence

This is the principle in which the actions or practices are right insofar as they avoid producing bad consequences. This is the foundation of all health care and describes the first obligation that every health care provider embraces — do no harm. In Latin, the term is primum non nocere which means first, do no harm.

3. Beneficence

This refers to the ethical obligation to maximize benefits and to minimize harm. In the research context, it is unlikely that direct benefit will accrue to research subjects. Benefits should outweigh the harms.

4. Justice

This refers to the ethical obligation to treat each person in accordance with what is morally right and proper, and to give to each person what is due to him/her. It is based on the principle of distributive justice. For HBR, the investigator must ensure that potential benefits and risks are reasonably balanced and risks are minimized. Justice also requires that research be responsive to the health conditions or needs of vulnerable subjects. Especially attention must be given to vulnerable persons, i.e. those with higher susceptibility to harms and/or with reduced ability to protect their rights and welfare, such as pregnant women, minors, prisoners and the mentally incapacitated.

5. Privacy and Confidentiality

The information, data revealed by a research subject or a patient in a relationship of trust should be maintained confidentially and should not be divulged to others. Examination of the research subject, oral consultation, counselling should be done with utmost privacy.

6. Veracity

7. Fidelity

Dayananda Sagar College of Dental Sciences- Institutional Review Board (DSCDS – IRB) is a vehicle to review and approve all research proposals on biomedical, social and behavioural science research for health involving human participants, their biological material and data to safeguard the dignity, rights, safety and well-being of all research participants.
